KENYA, the land of Quality Teas

Kenya is located on the eastern part of Africa bordering the Indian Ocean with the equator running through the middle of the country.

Tea was first introduced in Kenya in 1903 by GWL Caine and was planted in present-day Limuru. Commercialization of tea started in 1924 by Malcolm Flyers Bell, who was sent out by Brooke Bonds to start the first commercial estates. Since then the nation has become a major producer of black tea.

Currently Kenya is ranked first before China and India in tea production. Kenyan tea is also one of the top foreign exchange earners, alongside tourism, horticulture, and Kenyan coffee.

Much of the tea grown in Kenya is processed using the crush, tear, curl method, making it suitable for use in blends popular in most black-tea markets. CTC tea has a homogeneous taste and a strong generic, bold "tea" flavor and is the base of most Indian tea blends as well as a significant portion of breakfast teas.

The background of the entire page is filled with light green line-art illustrations of various tea-related items: lemons, spoons, a teapot, a tea bag, a strainer, and tea leaves. A decorative wavy line of dashed circles weaves through the scene. At the bottom, there are photographs of a white teapot and two cups of red tea, surrounded by fresh green tea leaves.
